OFF THE TRACK.

Railway Grief Near the Wood Street Crossing of the Central.

There was an ugly accident at the switch on the Illinois Central railroad to-day at noon below the Wood street crossing. The train to come to grief was the north bound Peoria, Decatur & Evansville local freight. The train was coming along at the rate of about fifteen miles an hour when the locomotive suddenly left the track, and the forward wheels and drivers tore up the roadbed and bent the rails out of shape. The engine did not fall over, but a foot or two of the roadbed was torn up and the engine left the rails, but part of the train ran along and took the rails on the side track. It was a bad mix, but fortunately no one was killed. The engineer and fireman were seriously bruised by the sudden lurch of the locomotive.

It will take all afternoon for the wreck crew to clear the track for the passage of trains.

Waiting for her until about 8 o'clock he grew anxious and going to the Illinois Central depot he discovered that she had bought a ticket to Decatur. He took the next train and on arriving here found that she had bought a ticket to Chicago. He also states that she has relatives in that city. According to Mr. Lee's statement he knew nothing of his wife's intention and that if he had known that she wanted to leave he would have gladly given his consent. He says now that he will find her if it takes a week to do it and he left on the noon train for Chicago. The couple have been married 15 years.

PURSUED A HORSE THIEF.

A Lively Chase from Illiopolis to Funk's Grove in McLean County.

Springfield Journal.
Wednesday morning a man appeared at Illiopolis on foot. Shortly afterward he went away on horseback, having appropriated two horses belonging to Mr. J. D. Foster of that village. The loss was soon discovered and a party started in pursuit. The pursuing party grew with its progress, being composed of men armed with shotguns, revolvers, pitchforks, etc. The thief made straight for Mt. Palank, where he stole a wagon from a man named Moore, and harnessed another gentleman. His course led northwest through Logan county and the avengers pursued him after him, and on into McLean county to Shirley. About two miles west of Shirley they caught sight of the thief, who, finding that the pursuit was getting dangerous, abandoned the team and took to the woods. "I'm afraid he's very hard just now," was the reply. "Is it anything I can do for you?"

"No, sir. It's very important, and I must see the postmaster himself."

"I'll find his office at the other end of the corridor."

"I am his assistant," said a handsome young man. "I think I can attend to what you would like looked after."

"I want to see the postmaster himself."

"He is not in just now, but I think I can do just as well."

"Perhaps you can. Then I want to complain about the loss of a letter. I wrote it a month ago, and addressed it to Mrs. Anne McClosky, Trenton, N. J. Now, sir, he never got that letter, and I want some one punished for it."

"Where did you mail it?"

"I didn't mail it myself. You see," she added, with a blush, "I was married only a month ago, and came here to live. The next day I wrote a letter home and gave it to my husband to mail."

"Did you ask him if he mailed it?"

"No, for course he did."

"My dear madam," said the officer, "I see you have had very little experience with this sort of thing. The post office department has a rule that it is not responsible for letters given over to their husbands to mail. I will write you to mail your own letters hereafter. If not, the department is powerless to help you. You will probably find the letter to your mamma in your husband's inside coat pocket. Good morning, madam."

She went out sadly. She had received her first lesson in the untrustworthiness of man—Anna Pierpont Sivilier, in Brooklyn Life.

—Temperance.—Tory M. P.—"I regard the use of wine as the true temperance principle. When I work all day and am completely 'done up,' nothing helps me like a glass of good sound wine. It restores nature, you understand." Radical Friend—"If always makes a fool of me." Tory M. P.—"Just so that's what I say—it assists nature."—Jady.

—Her Mother—"I saw him kiss you. I am terribly shocked. I did not suppose he would do such a thing. He is himself."—Nor L. In fact, I bet him he didn't dare."

EXCITEMENT AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

A Man in Danger of Lynching for Brutally Throwing a Mexican Burro Over a Cliff.

There is a Cliff Dwellers exhibit at the World's Fair. This exhibit embraces a mimic mountain with bridge-paths and the caves of the Cliff Dwellers. In some places these cliffs are fifty or sixty feet high and around which the bridge paths run and which are traversed by Mexican burros. These little creatures are a great curiosity to thousands who daily view with keen interest this part of the exhibit. Yesterday a man who was visiting the fair came out upon one of the bridge paths in front of three of these double little burros and threw two of them over the precipice, which at that point was fifty feet high. The fall killed one of the animals and stunned the other. The Chicago Tribune describes the scene as follows:

As the man stepped out onto the bridge path he saw a string of three burros approaching him. Anybody else would have found room to pass between the burros and the edge of the cliff. The space between was not sufficient for the man, and advancing to the first burro he seized it by the bridle and deliberately hurled it over the edge of the precipice. The poor animal uttered an almost human cry of distress as it found itself thrown from the path. It struck the rocks below and laid there writhing in agony. The removal of one obstacle from the path was not enough for the man. He seized the second burro in the same way and pushed it also over the edge of the cliff. This burro fortunately struck a softer spot, and it seemed by his anger the man rushed to seize the third animal, when he was himself seized by K. N. Pierce, an attendant of the exhibit. While almost supine in the strength the man threw Pierce to the ground, and rushing along the path disappeared over the further side of the mountain.

There was a large crowd in the exhibit at the time. I saw the trouble on the path and the fall of the first burro. I saw the man throw the second burro. I saw the man throw the third burro.
